G.T.P. WILL PASS SUMMIT OF ROCKIES BY END OF '11

_____

The main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific will be completed as far as the Teje Juan cache, 47 miles west of the summit of the Rocky Mountains, in the month of September of this season. That is the statement of the various contractors and sub-contractors who have just returned from the Teje Juan contracts in the line in the mountains.

It is the expectation of Messrs. J. H. and J. W. Stewart, who will complete their contract to Teje Juan outfits to work. To the Capital Hill morning, he stated that he would have all his outfits on the ground as soon as he could arrange for their shipment up from the western states, and that he would have been ten years working on Great Northern railway construction in the mountains.

Specifically all of the construction that is to be done on the Grand Trunk Pacific this season west of Edmonand with this end in view, are already well advanced. The work is now west, to the camps that they have established in the mountains. The men are now being required over 3000 men.

Active construction has already begun on the new work camp at Athabasca, according to H. E. Carleton, one of the sub-contractors. The new work camp is now a guest at the Alberta Hotel. It has a sub of twelve miles on the other side of the Athabasca River. The camp, which has already started some quite an immense amount of construction work, will require to be required in the mountains, and work on these is also to proceed this week. It is expected that the contractors that construction through the fellowhead will be comparatively

Other sub-contractors who have been given rock contracts on the line, are now working on the line within the next few weeks. A large part of construction can be done in the winter months during the remaining winter months.

The proposed trail from end I have so far decided that the route is an impossible one, and that I am going out by the old route, and I am going to make the outfit as I consider it much cheaper, surer and quicker than ever attempted before. I am going to take the much mooted Edison-Medicine Lodge Short Route.

Yesterday afternoon, Superintendent Griggs, of the electric light department, of the water works department, and Griffiths of the telephone department who have been in the city for the last few days, said that they are increased to $400 a month, or $2400 a year.

Proposed increases for other heads of departments were taken up later. The present superintendent of the street railway department receives $50 a month. His successor, Mr. J. H. ## A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A CEYLON TEA-PLANTER

As I leave my bungalow in order to attend muster (says E. F. Sellar in Chamber's Journal) which is supposed to take place at dawn, the correct time may be anything between five and six o'clock, a.m. As soon as muster is over the superintendent "makes" his six and his own watch and the factory clock are set accordingly. Thus the horology of an estate goes on untrammelled by Greenwich or even the nearest station clock—an independence which occasionally leads to the disappointment entailed by the loss of a train.

This morning in question, after the heavy rain, during the night, the air has an indescribable freshness. My bungalow stands at an elevation of some three thousand feet, and commands an extensive view stretching for miles of the country, at this hour covered, as though by a billowy caecobolus, with a dense curtain of white cloud. As I reach the barabene of the factory most of the coolies are already mastered in rows; a few stragglers are still hastening up, urged to greater celerity by the fluent and in many cases, unprintable admonitions of the "kanganyas,"—native overseers and head of a gang of coolies. By virtue of his office, extra pay, and responsibility, the "kangany" in theory is of greatest assistance in the management of an estate. In practice he is ever loquacious and noisily contentious—in the superintendent's presence.

Attendance at muster is not an attractive duty. The coolies, cold and shivering, wrapped in their dark "cam-bolis," and bearing the unmistakable air of having just got up, present a very different spectacle from the brightly-clad, chattering throng which may be seen an hour or so later when the sun has increased in power and correspondingly raised their spirits and vitality. A few orders are briefly given, and the coolies rush off to their appointed tasks, amidst vociferous shouts and exhortations touching the sin of procrastination on the part of their "kanganyas," who in the superintendent's presence show a commendable, if noisy, zeal for vicarious labor on the part of their charges.

Next I proceed to the factory. Some men pride themselves on the scientific supervision they devote to the manufacture of tea; others laud the skill of their native tea-maker, with whose judgment, it is whispered, they rarely interfere, in this instance, it would be invidious to record from the writer's own experience which method yields the best results and the highest prices. As so much misconception seems to exist as to the method of making tea, even among shareholders in tea companies, at the risk of being pedantic, I may be well briefly to describe the process.

When the fresh green leaves are shrivelled in from the field they are first spread on shelves of jute bannan or wire so that they may wither. The period of drying depends upon the state of the atmosphere, and in wet weather an artificial current of warm air is, if feasible, put into use. Eighteen hours may roughly be taken as an average time in which the green leaf should be allowed to wither. Now in order to extract the moisture, the tea is rolled in powerful machines which can put pressure to any desired extent on the green leaf. After the leaf has been issued from the roller an sticky yellowish lumps it is spread out and allowed to ferment. Then the leaf is hastily run through a desiccator, or furnace of hot air, after which the spongy copper-colored mass comes out dry and brittle, in the form in which we recognize the tea in the canister at home. In this state it is sifted by a revolving cylindrical machine consisting of wire meshes of different sizes. The tea is thrown in at the top, where it is cutters meet it, then it is revolved quickly into the cylinder, and is ejected in its different grades, according to the size of the meshes through which it has been passed. The minute meshes eject fannings or dust, the next in size give the highly priced orange pekoe; then come ever increasing in bulk, broken pekoe, pekoe, and finally the coarse and stinky pekoe known as lough.

Of course, different estates have their distinctive methods of sifting, grading and labelling their tea. But, although small leaves and buds plucked green will invariably make the highest grade tea, it is an error to suppose, as it is said one worthy board of directors of tea estates did recently imagine, that the tea-bushes themselves can be made to grow a particular grade of tea. As we observe that broken orange pekoe invariably commands the highest price, we would recommend that all the new clearings be planted exclusively with broken orange tea-plants, these Solons in England are reported to have written to a bewildered tea-planter in their employment! To sum up, Pluck the buds and small leaves only, and you will make tea of the best quality, but lose in yield of crop. Pluck liberally of the leaves, coarse and fine, and you will get a greater number of pounds per acre, but your prices will suffer. In any case, the tea-ster, who he bushes themselves, is the final arbiter as to how your tea shall be graded.

But this is a digression. My inspection of the factory is soon over, and in a few minutes I am seated in my dining-room, fully occupied with "early tea"—a repast consisting of eggs, cold ham, home-grown and home-made tea, with toast, marmalade and fruit.

The meal over, I light my pipe and proceed to the office, outside the open windows of which some coolies are stationed. Their demands have a certain sameness, and consist of a desire to obtain a trifling advance on their pay, or else a request for "marantha" or medicine. The drugs most in use are chlorodyne, and quinine, though castor-oil is perhaps the most popular, for the Tamil coolie brags an almost unnatural zeal for that nauseous alarm, as in common with so many of his kind, he has a lively, unreasoning horror, of the "huge earth-shaking beast."

However, the elephant in question is a harmless one. Indeed, he once took part in temple processions and was favored of the Buddhist priests. But a list of pomp and ceremony did not suit him. One fine day he escaped; all efforts to capture him were futile, and for years this elephant has been leading a nomadic existence at the thick fringes of jungle bordering a succession of tea estates.

At length the pack suddenly issues from the jungle, and we are once again among tea, and at an elevation of close on five thousand feet. The air is fresh and invigorating, and the coolies on this little isolated tea-estate keep singularly free from fever, dysentery and the other ills to which Tamil flesh is so susceptible.

The estate is worked by a Tamil conductor, and a visit by the superintendent is only considered necessary about once a week. The kangany welcomes me, not so much from a feeling of esteem or affection as for the reason that he wishes an advance of pay, and is also anxious that I should undertake to send his watch to a European shop in Kandy to have the works of that long-suffering instrument adjusted. The question of the watch is submitted owing to my suggestion that the coolies up here earlier than they do on the larger estate below. I also improve the occasion by pointing to a few weeds in the tea, and this leads to voluble explanation and an assurance that extra coolies will be put on to the weed, for every acre of a tea-estate should in theory be kept as clean as a flower-bed of a well-ordered garden.

With the exception of a few weeds here and there the place looks in good order and the work appears satisfactory. And so, tempted by the fineness of the morning, and the glorious panorama stretched beneath me, where in the clear atmosphere the temple dappas of a ruined city some seventy miles distant can be discerned with the naked eye, I determined today for the first time to reach the higher peaks of the mountains on whose lower slopes the tea is planted, and once more I strike into the jungle. The path through long disuse, is difficult to find, and I take the precaution—somewhat intermittently, it must be confessed—to blaze the trail with my pruning-knife so that I may have something to guide me on my homeward way.

The undergrowth becomes very thick, and after a bit my knife is used in order to cut a way and facilitate progress. Finally I emerge into a comparatively clear space, suddenly with dwarf trees, only to find that another jungle interposes between me and the summit. "This is very pleasant, but it is not tea-planting," I reflect as I begin to retrace my footsteps. But, alas! the return journey seems as bewildering as the heights were baffling, and all traces of the blazed trail are lost. I lose the path and begin to flounder about among thick, clinging undergrowth.

Somewhat impatient of the absurd predicament, I climb a tree, and below me I see the Beulah of my search, a clear space of open tea belonging to a neighboring tea estate, and in the distance my own factory, coolies' lines and bungalow looking very much like carved Swiss toys. I have missed the point at which I entered, and have come half-way down a long, narrow strip of jungle; but at any rate I have not been going around in a circle. A minute or two later I strike a stream funtively trickling its way down the slopes. Following this, I soon emerge into the open, and in a short time after visiting the factory where the leaf plucked in the morning is being spread out on a rack, I am once again in my own bungalow, very tired, very hot, and indignantly thirsty.

At twelve I sit down to a solid meal of bacon and eggs, brinjial curry, beefsteak, cold meat and salad, ending with the inevitable curry and rice, and washed down by beer, whiskey and soda, tea, or fresh-squeezed lime-juice and soda, as inclination or prodigality may suggest. Then an adjournment to a long chair in the veranda follows; and after a comfortable rest or siesta, by two o'clock I am ready again for the field.

'This time my direction lays downhill, so telling the horse-keeper to meet me at four o'clock, and leaving the coolies behind, I take the shortcut through the tea, and am soon at the bottom of the estate, where the pluckers, pruners, and manurers are all at work in adjacent fields. There is a certain monotony about the appearance of growing tea, which looks from a distance like vast acres of gooseberry bushes planted methodically in rows. Here, however, the elevation is only some two thousand feet, and we are in the vicinity of rice-fields, bamboos, and other signs of tropical vegetation, in startling contrast to the dark growth of the higher reaches; while in place of the dusky minas which flitted about the jungle, flocks of grey-colored, noisy parrots and brilliant golden orioles are to be seen.

After spending some time with the men who are pruning and forking in manure I go to the pluckers. These are divided into two gangs. The old women and children are plucking the tea which is two years from pruning, and consequently again ready for the knife. Little time need be wasted in the supervision of this gang, as they can be left to strip the bushes as ruthlessly as they choose. In the next field, however, where the tea is cutting into bearing after pruning, great care must be taken in the plucking. The gang employed in this task is a select one, consisting of a few smart boys and several young and in some instances good-looking girls. These young women earn good pay, and can afford to wear clean and showy clothes, and adorn themselves with much native jewellery. A tendency to almost coquetish frivolity is noticeable among them; but they are good workers, and can pluck an astonishing quantity of pounds of leaf per acre. (Four pounds of green leaf make one pound of manufactured tea.)

At four o'clock the horn blows as a signal to knock off work, my horse is ready for me, and much chatter of jest and much chattering of the coolies proceed to the factory to have their leaf weighed under their names entered in the check-roll.

The tea is duly inspected and weighed, a little tea-tasting follows, and finally round the factory, as I am ready to go back to the bungalow, when a cherry "Coon-ey" and a clattering of hoofs in the barabene warns me of the arrival of a dural (literally "master"), corresponds to the "shahib" of India. This proves to be my nearest neighbor, a Scissman and a gentian, who looks on me, as a new-comer to the district, in the light of one to be cultivated, perhaps in a friendly manner, almost patronized, by the older residents. Inactive-

tion—somewhat intermittently, it must be confessed—to blaze the trail with my pruning-knife so that I may have something to guide me on my homeward way.

MAYOR WAS MISQUOTED

"I do not know anything more about Com. Boulton's reason for desiring the dismissal of Supt. McNaughton today than has already appeared in the newspapers," said Mayor Armstrong this morning in entering an emphatic protest against a statement which he regards as a misrepresentation of the reasons concerned in the Journal's news columns this morning. "I informed Commissioner Boulton that if he had reason for thinking that Mr. McNaughton should have been dismissed a year ago, he was guilty of neglect in not firing him at that time, but this is by no means the same thing as an admission that a reason for this course of action had been presented to me."

NEW DAIRY BYLAW

Inspection and regulation of every dairy in the city, or supplying the city with milk without regard to the number of cows kept by the owners, will be provided for in the new dairy bylaw. This decision was reached by the board of health as the outcome of a conference with the dairymen's association.

Under the present conditions the bylaw which exempts from inspection the premises of parties who do not own more than two cows, is open to serious question, said Dr. Whitman in an interview with The Capital.

It is probable that the provision for compulsory registration of the tuberculin test will be modified or will not be imperative for some time to come. Without a provincial law making the application of the test universal, it is contended that undue hardship would be inflicted on individuals.

Opportunity Knocks But Once

IN some countries. In this part of the world it keeps continually hammering, and if you fail to arise it will pull you out of bed, thrust a ready-made chance into your hand and compel you to take advantage or count yourself among the dead ones.

Alberta Park is a Genuine Opportunity

LEAVE it to yourself. Do you know any other property situated so close to a thriving city like Edmonton which can be bought for $250 an acre or on such easy terms? Do you know any property that is more certain to advance in price with the growth of the city? Do you know of any place where you can make a smaller investment with greater certainty of a handsome profit?

You Take Absolutely No Chance In This

IN BUYING one of these Five-acre Blocks at $250 an acre, one quarter cash and the balance in six, twelve and eighteen months, you take absolutely no chance of failure. The property already is worth every cent that is being asked for it. You could not lose if Edmonton never grew another thousand and you could not fail to make a profit unless the whole country stops growing.

Procrastination Is The Only Risk To You

THE only way you can fail to make money on Alberta Park Acreage is to delay until the blocks are all sold. They are going very rapidly and the opportunity which presents itself now will not be open long. Come and learn more about this.

SPARKLETS

George Tebeau will spend $15,000 on his Kansas City ball park to increase its seating capacity to 14,000.

Jeff Pfeiffer, the Cub pitcher, who is wintering at Dorchester, Mass., is keeping in condition by playing golf.

Miller Huggins, turned loose by Clarke Griffith in favor of Dick Egan, outplayed Egan in all departments last season.

Cincinnati is anxious to dispose of Lew Moren. He was offered to several teams, but all declined to take the millionaire's son.

Manush, the young infielder passed up by Connie Mack as a failure, will be tried by Manager McGraw, of the Giants, next spring.

Ed Barrow has so far selected only three of the necessary eight Eastern League umpires. The other five to be employed will be announced at the meeting in Baltimore on February 6.

"Toots" Schultz, the crack pitcher of the University of Pennsylvania team, will not join a professional team. He denies that he has signed a contract to play with the Highlanders.

Harry Niles, the outfielder whom Toledo secured recently from Cleveland, will be given the center field berth with the Mud Hens. His side comrades will be Hickman and Hallman.

Charles Rigler, of Tom Lynch's staff of National League umpires, has been engaged to coach the base ball team of the University of Virginia, where Rigler is a second-year law man.

Charlie Dooin must have a wonderful voice. The Philly manager got $25 the other day for singing in a talking machine, and one day last summer Charlie also got $25 for talking to Umpire Klem.

They say that Connie Mack has more good youngsters tipped off to him than any other manager in the big leagues. Or is it that Mack has more youngsters tipped off to him whom he makes good?

Manager Dooin of the Phillies wants another experienced catcher added to his receiving staff to help out Moran and himself. If the Pirates ask waivers on Simon it is likely that he will wear a Philly uniform.

Sharpe, the first baseman of the Boston Nationals, is in bad health and has been spending the winter down at George Stallings' cottage plantation in Georgia. He does not intend to play professionally next season.

Billy O'Hara must have lost some of his ambition after quitting the Giants. He certainly had all sorts of speed in the big show, but he did not display it in the Eastern League. With Toronto last year he stole only 18 bases.

Manager Fred Tenney of the Dove-Rasters, has signed a young giant pitcher who answers to the name of Joseph J. Callahan. The youngster, who is a product of Cushing Academy, is six feet one inch tall, and weighs 185 pounds.

Dowl, the young pitcher who was given his release by the Hoosiers late last season, is to get another chance with Burke's tribe. Watkins thinks that in him and that bad health was the direct cause of his poor showing last season.

Ward Miller, the outfielder shipped to Montreal by the Reds this winter, says that if he can't make a living playing major league ball he will quit the game and go into the jewelry business. Maybe he can make good on those diamonds, but on the one the ground keeper looks after he failed to sparkle.

Bill Hopke, the third baseman, has dug up a brand new reason for holding out for more money. Hopke became the property of a Western League Club this winter, but he does not like the salary offered him. He says that he deserves more because he is a good mascot, having played with three pennant-winning clubs in as many seasons.

"Izzy" Hoffman, center fielder of the Providence Greys, has challenged Chief Bender, star pitcher of the world's champion Athletics, to a shooting match at live birds for a big side bet. Hoffman is the champion wing shot of the Eastern League, and Connie Mack's Indian twirler enjoys the same distinction in the American League.

William Lange, former idol of Chicago National League Club Ball, was arrested in San Francisco for exceeding the speed limit in the automobile which was presented to him by Chicago base ball enthusiasts when he visited that city in the World's Series between the Athletics of Philadelphia and Chicago. Lange was making his first trial at the wheel when he was arrested.

Harry Cassidy, the outfielder of the Denver Club, claims a world's record. In the past four seasons that he has been a member of the Grizzlies he has taken part in every game played. His record is 490 consecutive games. It is nothing unusual for an outfielder to play in every game throughout a season. To take part in every contest for four consecutive seasons is believed by Cassidy to be a world's record.

President Parker of the Grand Rapids Club has issued a statement to Grand Rapids' fans in which he says the Stags will have one of the strongest clubs in class B base ball. Parker says he has been signing players for weeks and will buy more at once. Regarding the report that the Stags would be a White Sox farm, Parker said: "Comiskey and Murphy have promised to let me have some of their surplus players this spring, but we will not be tied up with them in any way."

Thomas J. O'Brien, a new twirler for the Red Sox, is a fine singer. Also is he a pitcher with some good marks after his name. Signs he to-day, and the trip to the Coast, he takes with no fear gripping his manly heart, for good he made in the little old Connecticut League, and a swatman is he also, a home-runner. Tall is he and strong as the oak. Pshaw! This has gone far enough. Let it go that he is all that has been said of him and then some, and also remember that "every little bit added to what you have is just a little bit more." If big Jit Taylor keeps on he is going to have some music in his bunch of ball players, and if the base ball games make no money out on the Coast he will put on an opera company. Also if he keeps on he will have the biggest string in try out of any team in the country, but he has an unexpurgated train of his own to the far land of Sitting Bull and the Setting Sun. More power to the Red Sox.

Cornelius J. McGillicuddy, more popularly known as Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, would have been greatly surprised a few years ago if anybody told him that a director of education would point to him as an example in a teaching way. That is what occurred, however, when Superintendent O. A. Morton, of the Marlboro, Pa., school department in a talk to the teachers called their attention to the qualities so pronounced in the Philadelphia base ball manager and advised the teachers to use the same idea in teaching the young how to shoot. Superintendent Morton spoke of the success Cornelius McGillicuddy has attained by taking practically unknown ball players and making them champions of the world. This was largely done, he said, by diplomacy and in imbuing those under him with confidence. The teacher, like the base ball manager, he said, can accomplish much by using tact and inspiring methods in the work.

Dan Howley of Weymouth, who gained his first base ball experience with Boston semi-professional clubs, and who for the past five seasons has been catcher for the Indianapolis club of the American Association, is planning to take two base ball teams to Ireland next fall to tour the Emerald Isle and play in the various cities there. Howley has listed many players for the trip, among whom are "Hub" Hart, of Everett, this year with Cleveland, and Jack Hayden, the former right fielder of the Boston Americans.

A handsome woman who had been so unfortunate as to find occasion for divorcing not one, but several husbands, was returning from Nevada. In Chicago she happened to meet her first husband, for whom, by the way, she always had entertained a real affection.

"Upon my soul, if it isn't Charlie," exclaimed the ex-wife, cordially shaking the hand of the gentleman whose name she formerly had borne, "I'm awfully glad to see you, Charlie!"

Then, after an expression of wistful regret had come to and been banished from her countenance, she added: "Old chap, I've often wondered where you were and what you were doing. It was too bad we didn't get on better together. I hope your experience hasn't been as unpleasant as mine! I am just sick and tired of marrying strangers!"

Desiring first-hand facilities the pictures are accepted, the proffered ad of Grand Trunk officials, that of new transcontinental railroad now building through Canada.

In a general way the pictures obtained were divided into three classes: those showing the picturesque; those showing the staple and substantial character of the railroad; and those showing the wonderful commercial possibilities of the new line.

At some of the picturesque class, certainly one would be interested in those of the National Park at Watkinsburg, and the hundreds of sheep, buffaloes. Over two thousand feet of these films have been secured by the management of the new line, and will be included in the programme for Thursday and Friday.

STRATHCONA NEWS

STUDENTS TO HOLD RECEPTION TONIGHT

Second Annual Conversazione Will Be Held at University of Alberta This Evening

Strathcona, Feb. 2.—The big event in the college year as far as the student body of Alberta University is concerned will be held tonight in the assembly hall of the Strathcona Collegiate. This is the second annual conversazione of the undergraduates and a very brilliant social function is planned and expected to result. Great preparations have been and are being made for the event and the guests tonight will find the halls ablaze with artistic decorations. About five hundred invitations have been issued and it is safe to say, from the attendance so far, that the majority of those invited will be present. The following ladies are named as patronesses and guests: Mrs. Sifton, Mrs. Stuart, Mrs. Beck, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. Tully, Mrs. Parke, Mrs. Heston, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Broadbent, Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Kerr.

The reception will be held in the library from 8 to 10 p.m. after which musical and literary programme will be given. Those assisting in the program will include: Miss Cecil Smith and Miss Margaret Maguire. For the second part of the evening a promenade and dance will be held in the hall.

Refreshments will be served from 10:30 to 12 o'clock. By special arrangements street cars will be waiting at First street west which will leave for Edmonton at 1:30 a.m.

S. R. P. A. Meeting Tonight.—The regular monthly meeting of the Strathcona Rotary association is announced for tonight in the court room of the city hall. Secretary Austin states that a number of important subjects are up for discussion, one of the leaders being the probable grant to the board of trade from the city council. It is announced from different sources that there will likely be considerable civic interest in what is being heard by some members of the association for the way in which the publicity campaign has been conducted. Whether this attack will materialize or not is not definitely known.

Other local topics to be talked on will be sanitation arrangements and amalgamation.

Local Hotelman Killed.—A case of more than ordinary interest was on the docket at the police court yesterday forenoon, when after the hearing of several witnesses, it was remanded for one week by Magistrate Downes. The information was laid against manager Geo. McGuire of the Windsor Hotel by the chief of police on a charge of having permitted the playing of pool after eleven o'clock at night and having refused admission to a party of three who were present when this was demanded on the night of January 14th. Acting city solicitor Grant appeared for the chief of police, D. Mills and N. C. Wilson conducted the defence. For the prosecution only one witness was heard, policeman McIntyre. He swore that he saw men with pool tables after eleven o'clock, from a viewpoint on Whyte avenue. He demanded admission to the premises but claimed this was refused by Mr. McGuire.

Mr. McGuire denied flatly that he spoke to the policeman through the window as contended and did not know that McIntyre wanted into the hotel, the outside doors being locked. He also denied that any game had been played in the hotel after eleven o'clock on the night in question. His evidence was corroborated in the main by three other witnesses who were present in the pool room when the policeman rapped at the window. The case is expected to be heard this afternoon in the city by-laws and is the first prosecution of the kind by the police.

McGuire was charged with violation in the city by-laws and is the first prosecution of the kind by the police.

The premier prize of the City Curling club, the Lord Strathcona cup, was won last night by the veteran skip, City Engineer A. J. McLean. His possession of the handsome and coveted trophy was established by superior play, his opponent City Electrician S. Kelly, being outpointed in the majority of ends. The ice was in the best of shape but interest failed to run high owing to the safe lead that McLean maintained throughout the match. It was somewhat surprising that notwithstanding which way victory lay, representatives from the city hall should have been present to witness the play of the five men of the two teams hail from various civic departments. The teams were:

McLean . . . . . Foster
D. Hoffman . . . . . Young
H. Hoffman . . . . . Hoffman
McLean, skip . . . . . Kelly, skip
Score by ends:

McLean . . . . . 131
Kelly . . . . . 131
Total . . . . . 262

Strathcona Locals.
For the second time during the past four months Fred Robinson of Edmonton, appeared in the police court when he was charged with having taken place after eleven o'clock on the night of the bridge falls. In this instance he was fined $10 and costs.

Fred Merenichuk, a Galician of some note in Edmonton police ranks, was yesterday fined $5 and costs by Magistrate Downes for carrying concealed weapons and firing same within the city limits.

The draw in the Ocheer cup series opens tonight at the curling rink on six games to play. This draw will extend into March and is the last of the season's cup series.

The firemen are expressing their very appreciation of the contribution shown them, on the morning of the big fire this week, by Mrs. McGuire of the Dominion hotel and Mrs.

FRONTAGE TAX ON ALL UNIMPROVED PROPERTY

Owners Must Pay Extra Where Water and Sewerage Main Parallel Lots

Owners of vacant property will be compelled to bear a much larger share of the burden of municipal taxation when the amendment to the charter which will be introduced to levy a frontage tax against property post which watermain have been laid, is put into force by the council. The amendment was carried on the first session of the legislature, and the frontage tax will be enforced this year.

When the matter comes up for consideration in the council, Ald. McIntyre will move that the full tax of one cent a front foot, permitted under the charter, be levied in respect to property on paved streets, while a tax of five cents a foot be levied on unpaved streets.

The Hudson's Bay Company, owner of the largest area of vacant property in the city, will be forced to pay a very heavy increase in taxation this year, on account of the new tax, and it is expected to assess water and subdivided land this year, upon the same basis as corresponding subdivided land, there will be an increase in the contribution of the company to the city treasury greater than has taken place in any previous year.

LOOKING FOR OIL.—Oil fields which are believed to have been located several miles north of the Morinville oil fields, are so being explored by a local company, whom a party of thirty men was sent north yesterday. The party left the city yesterday morning on the C. N. R. for Morinville and will probably be in a northerly direction. Their exact destination has not been announced.

Should the outcome of the expedition be successful, it is understood that the company will take immediate steps to develop the oil fields to which they have gone reason to believe exist in the territory north of the Morinville fields.

NEW REALTY FIRM.—J. C. Davis of the J. C. Davis Company, Calgary, and Norman D. Jackson, formerly of the Alberta Hotel, Calgary, under the firm name of Davis & Jackson, have formed a partnership to engage in the realty business in the city of Edmonton. They have secured offices at 68 Jasper avenue, and it is their intention to commence business on Monday.

The new firm expects to offer very favorable salaries. Through the Davis Company the firm will have access to an enormous list of agencies in the central states, where they are directed first-class firms in the largest centres being included in their connection. They already have a large list of farm land and the company owns the adjoining sub-division 50 Acres Central Alberta. The firm is jumping into prominence on account of the rapid railway development in the north-western section of the province. Mr. Jackson has recently been a very heavy purchaser of Edmonton real estate on his own account, acquiring an extensive holding of very valuable real property.

reservoir will be twenty-five miles long and more than 200 feet deep against the dam. It will have a capacity of 56,628,000 cubic feet, or sufficient water to cover the State of Delaware a foot deep.

The reservoir will irrigate 240,000 acres of land and it is estimated by expert agriculturists that the crops of a single season will pay for the entire investment of the government, which has been about $8,000,000. Not only will the great dam save the water for the dried fields, but it will also light the farmers' homes, give them the power for their telephone lines, run their mills and factories and also operate lines of railway if desired. All of this will be done through the medium of a great power-house which the Government has erected at the base of the dam and which will be used to convert the water into electricity.

The completion of the dam is expected to result in the influx of thousands of farmers to the valley and this in turn will create a demand for all classes of labor. The whole project is a part of the Government's great irrigation service, which, as some one has said, "is making the dry places wet and wet places dry. In a most wonderful way the various irrigation projects in Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Colorado and other sections of the West are rapidly changing the country from a land of sagebrush and cactus to one of the most prosperous farms and flourishing towns.

"Of all the projects of the kind yet undertaken in the Government, the Roosevelt dam is the largest in part of dimensions. It is about twenty-five feet higher than the famous Shoshone dam in north-western Wyoming, which is the largest structure of its kind completed up to the present time. The material quantities involved in the construction of the Shoshone dam were, however, much greater than in the Roosevelt project.

N. D. Mills. Both ladies served warm food and drank the half-frozen men between four and six o'clock.

The annual campaign for the collection of dog licenses is ready to be inaugurated by the chief of police with much effect. The shining brass-bells have been received and their forcible distribution will be begun within a few days. Last year the police enforced the by-law with especial success.

The committee is expected to be in the city for some time.

PLUMBERS RESPONSIBLE

A slipshod method of installing plumbing connections in the older houses in the city is responsible for many of the services cut off by frost during the present winter, according to Supt. McLean of the waterworks department. In many instances the service connections are brought up the exterior of the basement wall, from the mains to the houses on and the inevitable result is ice with often the mercury falls.

CHINESE WITNESSES TELL OF REAL TRAFFIC.—They Paid for Their Passports in Hong Kong to Brother of Yip On.

Vancouver, Feb. 2.—The first absolutely direct testimony, as to graft and fraud in connection with Chinese immigration into this port was placed before the royal commission investigating the question here this afternoon.

Two Chinese who had been promised immunity by Commissioner Justice Murphy, stated that they came to Canada on passports which had been purchased in Hong Kong from Chin Yip On, interpreter Yip On's brother.

The men said they had been told what to say on reaching this port and supplied with letters to Yip On. These were duly delivered, and Yip On promised them money to pass the customs officials, which was later returned to the interpreter.

Both men said they were now working as laborers.
